Survey of Citizens Shows Majority Want Township To Continue Protection

North Coventry township wants its own police protection. That was the result of a random opinion poll taken last night among representative citizens of the township.

of its one-man force, John J. Boyle, who is leaving April 1 for another job, most of the township residents who were questioned said they thought he had considerably reduced lawlessness in the area and particularly traffic violations.

Most felt that Boyle's main ing down speeders on Route 100 and consequent lowering of the

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE Emma B, 17, made the following comments about a former case record concerning fantasy lovers and excessive shyness in girls: "In answer to that case record, suppose one is shy and inclined to dwell in a dream realm. but her 'dream lover' is , Jesus. What love could be more real, more consoling, and more beautiful than the love of Him who died for love of us and in order to save us? "The reciprocation is beyond words. How pleased and thrilled He would be if there were but more dreamers."

. . . Religious belief is a wholesome and constructive force in society, and I have seriously mentioned that most of the unselfish and educational causes being sponsored today are originated and supported primarly by church people. But many women who are frustrated or innibited in the normal expenditure of their affection on other human peings. such as husbands, parents, children, or friends, occasionally go through a religious emotional transformation that exhilarates them. They feer joyous, exalted, excited and buoyant. In previous generations this personalolder adults used to believe that all Christians had to go through such a process or else they were not entitled to be members of the church.

Such conversions were more frequent among women than among men, and especially among unmarried girls. The term "conversion" was a good one to describe this situation, for the women changed or converted their love desires from a human outlet to the church. They made what is called a "transference" from a love fixation upon a father, brother, cousin, or imaginary Prince Charming, to the church. Many of the most ardent members of the church today are young women who, while not realizing the fact consciously, are nevertheless subconsciously romanticizing about the attractive minister in the pulpit.

Almost every reader of this column has probably seen instances to illustrate this point. An unmarried clergyman comes to tewn, and soon he has an audience in which many single women are found. If the clergyman moves to another city and a married cleric takes his place, these women lose much of their enthusiasm for church attendance.

Religious belief is a wholesome and constructive force in society, and I have seriously mentioned that most of the unselfish and educational causes being sponsored today are originated and supported primarly by church people. But many women who are frustrated

or inhibited in the normal expenditure of their affection on other human beings, such as husbands, parents, children, or friends, occasionally go through a religious emotional transformation that exhilarates them. They feel joyous, ex-In previous generations this personal-. . . or else they were not entitled to be members of the church. Such conversions were more frequent among women than among men, and especially among unmarried girls. The term "conversion" was a good one to describe this situation, for the women changed or converted their love desires from a human outlet to the church.

They made what is called a "transference" from a love fixation upon a father, brother, cousin, or imaginary Prince Charming, to the church.

Many of the most ardent members of the church today are young women who, while not realizing the fact consciously, are nevertheless subconsciously romanticizing about the attractive minister in the pulpit. Almost every reader of this column comes to town, and soon he has an audience in which many single women are found. If the clergyman moves to another city and a married cleric takes his place, these women lose much of their enthusiasm for church attendance. Women like Emma need to extrovert themselves. They should enlist in constructive works. They should expend af-

Gliding the plane in toward the airport, we uned up with the runway. As the airpiane lost altitude in the landing approach, we found that we might well miss our mark. The drift of the plane, as result of the wind, had moved us off our landing course.

"Crabbing" the airplane was the solution, Maxwell explained. We had done this previously in straight and level flight, but hadn't considered its application in landing. A pilot "crabs" an airplane by heading it into the wind to offset its force tending to crift the plane off its flight path.

Takeoffs and landings proved the most difficult part of our training. They combine judgment with a coordination of controls plus an ability to "feel" the proper attitudes of the airplane.

Briton Asks U. N. To Convict Albania In Channel Tragedy

P-Sir Alexander Cadogan of Great Britism called upon the United Nations Security council tonight to convict Albania of responsibility for laying a minefield in Corfu channel which damaged two British destroyers and killed 44 sailors the past Oct. 22.

Chmaxing a wordy tussle with Dr Oscar Lange of Poland, who suggested that Albania and Great Britain try to settle the dispute between themselves, Cadogan said:

"I have substantiated the charge He turned down the Polish idea, reminding the delegates that his government had attempted once before to settle the dispute pefore ranging it to the council.

He said the "hatred of the Albanian government for Great Britain' provided "motive enough" in the case. Cadogan submitted a formal esolution but the council adjourned until tomorrow without acting on it Cadogan's resolution proposed hat the Security council "ninds that an unnotified minefield was laid in the Coriu strain by the Albanian government or with its connivance, resulting in serious injury to His Majest,'s snips and loss of life and njury to their crews" and Albanian governments settle the dispute on the basis of the conviction of the Albanian government and provided that, in the event of 25,000,000 miles from the earth at failure of such a settlement, either some periods of the year.

Autopsy Shows Overell Had Skull Wounds; Daughter, Friend Held

SANTA ANA, Calif., March 20 (AP) -Walter Overell and his wife, Beulah, may already have been dead when an explosion shattered their yacht Saturday night in fashionable Newport bay, Sheriff James Musick said today

The Overells' 17-year-old blonde co-ed daughter, Beulah Louise, and her fiance, husky George Gollum, 21, were held on bookings of murder in an investigation of the deaths. Formal charges had not been filed against either and both denied any knowledge of the blast or of the presence of 31 sticks of dynamite and a wired clock found aboard after the explosion.

mittee that this country could not Fick waiting for action by the United Wations-that Greece, wearily batthing a Communist-led insurrection, has funds enough for only 14 days more of vital imports.

His testimony marked the preliminary round of a searching congressional examination of President Truman's request for $400,000,000 in money and material and "limited" military missions to the two Mediterranear countries.

With diplomatic caution, Acheson guardedly reframed from a direct reference to Russia. But there at home and a sister, Mrs. Ida Pen- (Sauer) Neiman, were held yesterwas no mistaking the implications when Representative Mansfield (D-Mont) asked his opinion on whether the Administration's program would lead to war.

A hush spread over the big, H Kauler. Interment will be in crowded committee room. Acteson hesitated for a moment rubbed his chin in thought. Then, he solemnly declared:

I was going to say no possibility it would lead to war."

He paused again, and went on:

"I don't think it could lead

His words were crisp, but calm "By strengthening the forces of democracy and freedom, you do a great deal to eliminate the friction between big powers."

Before this Rep. Merrow (R-N.H.) asked whether United States security would be imperiled if Greece and Turkey collapsed, fell under Communist control, and Russia became a Mediterranean nation. Acheson sidestepped. He said he would prefer not to answer questions containing a direct reference to another power on the ground "undoubtedly would be a source of embarrassment." If pressed, he said he would answer in a private

Said Merrow: "The people of the country want to know whether we are going to call the bluff of the Soviet Union That's why I made the statement.

Acheson: "It's one thing for you to make that statement. It's another thing for me."

Acheson obviously had in mind the aftermath of his testimony before a Senate committee considering confirmation of David E. Lilienthal as chairman of the atomic energy commission. Then, in response to questions, he termed Russia's policy "aggressive" and "expanding," drawing a Soviet pro-

Secretary of State Marshall backed Acheson and informed Russia that Administration efficials, under the American form of government, are required to answer queries from congressional committees. Now, with Marshall in Moscow, Acheson is acting secretary.

Again and again, Acheson emphasized that the Administration had considered — and rejected — the proposition of having the United Nations assume the burden in Greece and Turkey rather than step in alone.

"Time is of the essence," he stressed. And he declared — as did the President previously - that the machinery of the United Nations has not been geared yet for the action now required in the two countries.

He urged Bevin to reconsider British objections to instituting the formula now and also writing it into the German peace treaty. Bevin had said priority must be given to making Germany self supporting so that she would not be a burden on occupying powers. Bidault said France, had no desire that Germany should continue to be a burden, adding: "But we think it possible both to balance foreign payment of Germany and satisfy the legitimate requirements of the Allied countries to import coal."

Declaring that he hoped Britain's attitude was not final, Bidault said that "Great Britain is aware that the coal problem is an essential one for France, and it is for a certain number of European countries.

mittee that this country could not risk waiting for action by the United Nations-that Greece, wearily battling a Communist-led insurrection, has funds enough for only 14 days more of vital imports.

His testimony marked the preliminary round of a searching congressional examination of President Truman's request for $400,000,000 in money and material and "limited" military missions to the two Mediterranean countries.

With diplomatic caution, Acheson guardedly refrained from a diwas no mistaking the implications when Representative Mansfield (D-Mont) asked his opinion on whether the Administration's program would rubbed his chin in thought. Then, he solemnly declared: "I was going to say-no possibility it would lead to war."

He paused again, and went on: "I don't think it could lead

His words were crisp, but calm. "By strengthening the forces of democracy and freedom, you do a great deal to eliminate the friction between big powers." Before this, Rep. Merrow (R-N.H.) asked whether United States security would be imperiled if Greece and Turkey collapsed, fell under Communist control, and Russia became a Mediterranean nation.

Acheson sidestepped. He said he would prefer not to answer questions containing a direct reference to another power on the ground it "undoubtedly would be a source of embarrassment." If pressed, he said, he would answer in a private

Said Merrow: "The people of the country want to know whether we are going to call the bluff of the Soviet Union. That's why I made the statement."

Acheson: "It's one thing for you to make that statement. It's another thing for me."

Acheson obviously had in mind the aftermath of his testimony before a Senate committee considering confirmation of David E. Lilienthal as chairman of the atomic energy commission. Then, in response to questions, he termed Russia's policy "aggressive" and "expanding," drawing a Soviet pro-

Secretary of State Marshall backed Acheson and informed Russia that Administration officials, under the American form of government, are required to answer queries from congressional committees. Now, with Marshall in Moscow, Acheson is acting secretary,

Again and again, Acheson emphasized that the Administration had considered - and rejected - the proposition of having the United Nations assume the burden in Greece and Turkey rather than step

wants is a "flexible formula" for coal exports which would be "adaptable to the rate of production, and which would take into account the requirement of the German

Bevin had said priority must be given to making Germany self supporting so that she would not be a burden on occupying powers.

Bidault said France had no desire that Germany should continue to be a burden, adding:

But we think it possible both to balance foreign payment of Germany and satisfy the legitimate requirements of the Allied countries to import coal.
